THE INSCRIBED MONUMENT
AT XANTHUS.

IN the Journals written on my two former visits to Asia Minor, I noticed an obelisk, bearing an inscription, standing amidst the ruins of the ancient city of Xanthus: on my recent visit to these ruins, I have taken advantage of having men and machinery at my disposal, to turn over the fallen portion of this monument, and to examine more closely the characters on the upper part of the stone. The transcript of the inscription now given is I think as perfect as it can be made; I have copied the whole afresh, and collated the copy with my former plates: I have also taken, and brought away with me, stamped impressions on paper of the whole inscription. From these materials the present engravings are made, on a scale of one inch to the foot.

I have added a plate, showing the position of the monument relatively to the theatre and other objects seen in the distance. From the marks of mortice-joints which I noticed on the top of the fallen fragment, and from the circumstance of there being some heavy pieces of a cap-stone near, I should judge that this monument has resembled in general form the high one seen in the distance, and presenting, in bas-relief, the legend of the daughters of king Pandarus. Having, with the assistance of a ladder, ascended to a level with the top of the monument, I discovered a curious fact: the characters cut upon the upper portion are larger and wider apart than those on the lower, thus counteracting the effect of diminution by distance, as seen from the ground.

The interest which has been excited about this monument induces me to engrave these plates, and it will be a great satisfaction to me if they should assist the endeavours now making by the learned in various parts of Europe to decypher the language of the ancient Lycians. It gives me pleasure to add, that some funereal inscriptions, which I have obtained on my recent visit, bilingual, Lycian with Greek, bear out many of the suggestions of my friend Mr. Daniel Sharpe given in the Appendix to the Journal of my second visit to Lycia.
